THAT GERMAN ANSWER.

Germany has answered the note of protest over the destruction of American lives by the sinking of the Lusitania. The United States sought to have Germany agree that Americans should be free to travel the high seas on any vessel of an enemy to Germany and that Germany would guarantee that the vessel should be searched and all passengers removed to a place of safety before the vessel should be sunk.

The reply of Germany in substance is that if the United States will guarantee that no contraband of war is carried on the passenger vessels Germany will respect them and allow them to pass without damage.

This has proven very unsatisfactory to the United States. A fair and unbiased view of the situation is bound to agree that Germany is entirely within her rights. Germany cannot and will not retreat from this position.

It is most disgusting and horrifying to a cool and unbiased view of the situation for the United States to appeal to Germany in the name of "humanity" not to sink or molest enemy passenger ships that are carrying contraband of war while we, for a mere monetary consideration, are contributing daily to the destruction of thousands of Germans by selling France and England millions of dollars worth of powder, shell and all manner of war munitions.

It is no reply to say that Germany has done wrong and that she is wrong now, for two wrongs do not make a right. No nation under the sun would feel good or hesitate to defend herself in every way possible against such unfairness when exercised in the name of "neutrality."

It is the kind of neutrality that the wolf exercises over the lamb when it protects and then devours it.

President Taft told the thousands of Americans who had made their homes in Mexico and who had their all there, that they must come out for the United States could not undertake to go to war to protect them and their property. President Wilson did the same, and they were both wise and right.

But when a country that is at war asks our people not to travel on the passenger ships of an enemy nation that are carrying war munitions, Mr. Wilson protests and demands entire freedom of travel.

Such inconsistency is out of all reason and is deserving of the most pronounced censure.

It is far more reasonable that our people should refrain from traveling on vessels loaded with war munitions than it is to ask our people to leave their property to the mercy of an irresponsible guerrilla army with the practically certain knowledge that it will either be confiscated or destroyed, and their lives sacrificed if they attempt to defend that property.

It has come to our knowledge in several instances the past two or three years that good farmers have remarked that they would rather own a farm on the Cumberland Plateau than in the valley adjoining—that means the average farm.

In the face of the splendid crops now in sight on this plateau there is liable to be many more people come to that same conclusion.

But that is not the only encouraging feature. Our people are becoming aware, as never before, that they can

HELPLESS AS BABY

Down in Mind Unable to Work, and What Helped Her.

Summit Point, W. Va.—Mrs. Anna Belle Emey, of this place, says: "I suffered for 15 years with an awful pain in my right side, caused from womanly trouble, and doctored lots for it, but without success. I suffered so very much, that I became down in mind, and as helpless as a baby. I was in the worst kind of shape. Was unable to do any work."

I began taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, and got relief from the very first dose. By the time I had taken 12 boxes, my health was completely restored. I am now 48 years old, but feel as good as I did when only 16.

Cardui certainly saved me from losing my mind, and I feel it my duty to speak in its favor. I wish I had some power over poor, suffering women, and could make them know the good it would do them."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, it will certainly be worth your while to give Cardui a trial. It has been helping weak women for more than 50 years, and will help you, too.

Try Cardui. Your druggist sells it.

produce more to the acre on this loose sandy soil than can be grown on the stiff, clay soils of the valleys, regardless of the methods employed by our valley friends.

The reason why this is true is not far to seek. On the stiff, clay soils of the valleys it is impossible for the roots of the crop to penetrate the soil rapidly enough to get the large amount of plant food necessary to grow exceedingly large crops. The loose, open soil of this plateau region permits the plant roots to penetrate it freely and take out the plant food very rapidly, thus enabling the plant to secure a very large amount of food within a short time, a big crop being the result.

Our people are beginning to realize this as never before and are becoming more contented and have a stronger faith in this section than ever before.

In spite of this fact there is much yet to learn and in the words of the queen of Sheba: "The half has never been told."

The publication of bank statements presents a problem to some country printers that is rather difficult to handle in some instances. W. W. Baker, former editor of the Monterey News, felt that he was entitled to full legal rates for such publications and when the bank refused to pay that rate brought suit and recovered on that basis.

Fortunately the Chronicle never has any such trouble for the bank here has always shown a most fair and generous attitude in all business matters and no friction ever arises.

That is a most pleasant condition and one that is appreciated both by the bank and the editor of the Chronicle.

Ozone

One of our readers contributes the following:

"Recently a Kansas town celebrated with profit 'Pay It Back Day' and we have heard considerable about the Oklahoma 'Take It Back Day.' Why not have a—Well! what shall we call it? For Ozone, I think 'Pay It Back, Take it Back and Don't Say It Again,' would be the best name for the day. That is, to insure the most lasting and beneficial results. Seems to me Ozone has needed such a day for a long long time."

"Imagine those of us it would effect. For instance, the fellow who has my umbrella, the friend who borrowed my barlow at the basket dinner. He, perhaps, needs the knife, but such a chance to celebrate the day, could he afford to miss it? Then, there's Mrs. So-and-so, who expressed her opinion so freely about my complexion, of course she would agree to modify it, and I in return would gladly change my own opinion about the dress he wore to the church festival. Now, when it comes to the scamp who gave me that black eye, guess he'd better keep it, he may return his best wishes instead."

"Think what an effect this rule of subtraction, cancellation, or whatever you may wish to call it, would have on our family differences, and also the grocer. I fear it would give him a lot of trouble. One of the neighbors inserted the following ad in the paper recently: 'I purchased a bag of sugar at a certain store the other day, it contained a large quantity of sand, if the rascal who sold me this sand will send me seven pounds of pure sugar by tomorrow night, I will not expose him.' He received nine 7-pound packages of sugar from as many different grocers. I know our grocers would have nothing on the program so embarrassing as that."

"Lemon squeezers, flour, salt, double shovels, feather beds, boiled shirts, moving blades, claw hammers, soda and all sorts of articles borrowed, but alas, forgotten until that day. Memory is treacherous. It is simply amazing how easy one forgets his debts and remembers who owe him."

"The celebration would turn the lights into neglected corners of personal duty, we would face ourselves, not our photograph. It would have a direct personal character. This day we look forward to so anxiously, might differ in some respects from most public demonstrations where the individual loses himself in the crowd. This time he would have to scurry and scamper from garret to cellar for his credentials, yet I am sure he would enjoy the day."

"The chief value of such a jubilee would be its nearness to the application of the maxim 'Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you.' Only he who had never done a wrong, or is under no obligation to his neighbor might afford to neglect the day, all others would need to take part."

"We would be forced to think of the extent and quality of our neighborliness. It might require a revision of our estimate of past conduct. Some of the recollections I am sure would be humiliating, but it would be wholesome exercise to recall where one has failed."

"It would put us on our guard. A sort of personal application of right living and duty; conscience would have a chance to discern both the bad qualities and the good in conduct. Many things said and done, overlooked in the haste of daily toil, would be recalled and repented of, and many worthy acts remembered and approved. It's so much better to face our faults here than hereafter. The day would open up a broad avenue of human service and surely make us better men and women. Where do you stand, are you with us?"
